

Quinta & Co. in One Page

An education studio for women founders · Dallas & online · first semester opens September 1, 2026

THE 30-SECOND VERSION

“Quinta & Co. is an education studio for women founders. Practical business and AI classes taught by women founders and professionals who do the work for a living — our bookkeeping class is taught by a bookkeeper, insurance by a broker, trademarks by an attorney. Every class runs at least an hour, never more than ten seats, and has to answer one question: what's the one thing no one tells you? Anyone can teach you how to do it — we start from the costly mistakes, and teach you how not to. First semester opens September 1 — in Dallas, and on Zoom from anywhere. I teach [your class] this fall.”

End the pitch with your own class — “I teach the class on...” — because the strongest pitch is one where the pitcher is proof.

WHO IT'S FOR — WOMEN AT THREE STAGES

The Seed (idea → year 1) · The Sprout (years 1–3) · The Bloom (year 3 and beyond). Every class maps to a stage — she comes for the class she needs now and stays as her business grows.

WHY WE'RE DIFFERENT, IN ONE LINE

We're built on the costly mistakes — the scars and the lessons. Anyone can teach you how to do it; no one is teaching how not to. Anyone can Google how to do it — but you can't Google what you don't know. Every Quinta class starts from the mistake, what it cost in dollars, and how she avoids it.

OUR SECOND PRODUCT: THE ROOM

Every class doubles as a network. Ten women, a practitioner who knows their names, and a faculty culture called The Swarm — when one of us launches, all of us show up. She leaves with the thing done and the women she did it with. And 2% of profit funds a scholarship program (a future nonprofit arm) so price never keeps a woman out.

The story, the vision, the difference

WHERE QUINTA COMES FROM

Erika González Harrison spent 20+ years in marketing and advertising, then built her first company — alone. It worked, but the isolation of founding a business was expensive: no one told her about the S-corp election deadline (five figures lost), no one introduced her to the bookkeeper she needed in month two, and the network she skipped never got built. In 2026 she rebuilt everything with AI as her staff — and turned both lessons into an education studio. Quinta is the room she wishes she'd had.

WHY “QUINTA”

The name is personal. Quinta is Spanish for “the fifth” — she who is fifth. Erika is one of five in her immediate family, and one of five granddaughters. She has always been one of a team of women — and that's exactly what she built: Quinta, & Co.

VISION

A world where no woman builds alone — where every founder has a faculty behind her, a room of women who've been there, and a swarm that shows up when she launches.

MISSION

We teach women founders the things no one tells them — practical business and AI classes in plain language, taught in small rooms by women who do this work for a living, priced so a real founder can actually come.

THE DIFFERENTIATOR, IN FULL

*“Anyone can teach you how to do it.
No one is teaching you how not to.”*

Quinta is built on the costly mistakes — the scars and the lessons learned. Every founder on our faculty has watched women pay for the same lessons, or paid for them herself. We start from there, because we are passionate that the next woman doesn't have to:

- You can't Google what you don't know. Search and AI are answer machines — they require you to already know the question. The costliest mistakes are the ones where you didn't know there was a question at all.
- Every class has one mandatory requirement: it must answer “what's the one thing no one tells you?” — the mistake, what it costs in real dollars, and how to avoid it. If a student could Google it, it doesn't belong in the class.

- The teacher is the source. Not a course-creator who researched the topic — a bookkeeper, a broker, an attorney, an HR director, a brand strategist, a financial planner. The scar tissue is the curriculum.
- The second product is the room. Ten seats, in person or on Zoom — every class doubles as the network she'd otherwise find by luck or loss. The class ends; the room doesn't.

Who she is — audience and stages

TARGET AUDIENCE

Women founders and owner-operators of small businesses — typically solo or under 10 employees, service and product businesses alike — who are rich in expertise and short on the business scaffolding around it. Primary: Dallas–Fort Worth. Secondary: Houston, Austin, Little Rock, and anywhere via Zoom (an in-person room opens in any city where three students enroll).

THE THREE STAGES — BY YEARS IN BUSINESS

The Seed

IDEA → YEAR 1

The side hustle is becoming real. Excited, overwhelmed, doesn't know what she doesn't know yet — which is exactly when the expensive mistakes get planted.

- Entity Set-up
- Banking
- Insurance
- Brand 101
- Claude for Beginners (AI I)

The Sprout

YEARS 1 – 3

Revenue is real but the systems aren't: shoebox books, guessed prices, handshake contracts, taxes as an annual surprise.

- Bookkeeping I & II
- Taxes
- Pricing
- Contracts
- Financial Planning
- Build Your AI Assistant (AI II)

The Bloom

YEAR 3 +

Established and eyeing bigger: corporate contracts, a first employee, protection, funding, and what she leaves behind.

- Your First Hire
- Get Certified (WBE/WBENC)
- Funding
- Trademarks
- Legacy Planning
- Databases & Automation (AI III)

Years are a guide, not a gate — a year-eight founder who never set up her books belongs in The Sprout's bookkeeping room, and no one blinks.

Three personas

Marisol, 34 — The Seed. Custom-cake baker whose side hustle just outgrew her kitchen. Quitting her job in October. Has an LLC form half-filled-out in a browser tab and a knot in her stomach.

What she needs first: Entity Set-up, Banking, Insurance. What she says: “I don't even know what I'm supposed to be worried about.”

Dana, 41 — The Sprout. Runs a two-person design studio, year two, $140K revenue. Invoices from her phone at midnight; taxes were “a surprise” last April; prices haven't changed since day one. Curious about AI but suspicious of hype. What she needs first: Bookkeeping I, Pricing, Taxes, the AI modules. What she says: “I'm making money and I still feel like I'm faking it.”

Yvette, 52 — The Bloom. Catering company, eight years in, steady corporate clients — and she just learned those corporations have supplier-diversity budgets she's never touched. Wants WBENC certification, her first real employee, and to protect what she's built. What she needs first: Get Certified, Your First Hire, Trademarks, Legacy Planning. What she says: “Nobody ever told me certification was even a thing.”

What all three buy, beyond the class: the room. Marisol meets the broker she'll call in year two. Dana meets nine women who also felt like they were faking it. Yvette meets her first hire's HR playbook and two women who've been through certification. The class ends; the relationships don't. That's the second product, and it's the one no competitor ships.

The landscape — and where we stand

A working list, not a formal analysis (that's still to come). These are good organizations — several are future partners, not enemies.

WHO	WHAT THEY OFFER	OUR ADVANTAGE
SCORE Dallas score.org	Free volunteer mentoring + generic workshops/webinars, nationwide	Free and worthy — but generalist volunteers and one-to-many webinars. Quinta is practitioner-taught, ten seats, built from the mistakes.
North Texas SBDC (Dallas College) ntsbdc.org	Free government-funded business advising and courses	Excellent for paperwork help; advising is reactive — she must know what to ask. Quinta teaches the questions she doesn't know she has.
The DEC Network thedec.co	Dallas nonprofit hub: events, WEDallas program, Dallas Startup Week	Great community energy, startup/tech-leaning, event-driven. Quinta is a curriculum with a room, not an event. Natural partner.
TWU Center for Women Entrepreneurs twu.edu	University center: advising, incubators (AccelerateHER), microgrants	Institutional and cohort-based — apply, get selected, commit months. Quinta is buy-a-seat-this-week: exactly what she needs now. Conversations already underway.
Hello Alice + online course platforms helloalice.com	Online guidance, grants database, self-serve courses at national scale	Content at scale is still content alone. No room, no bookkeeper who knows your name. Quinta's second product is the network in the chairs.

The one-sentence position: free resources answer the questions founders bring; accelerators take the few who apply; online courses scale content without community. Quinta is the only one built backwards from the mistake she hasn't made yet — taught by the woman who has, in a room she keeps.

What we are deliberately NOT: not a mastermind (no $5K seats), not a webinar funnel (no upsell ladder), not an accelerator (no application, no equity, no six-month commitment). An education studio: semesters, faculty, small classes, plain language.

Partnership road map (say this out loud at the conference): Quinta plans to partner with North Texas SBDC and The DEC Network as continuing resources for our students — and conversations with TWU's Center for Women Entrepreneurs have already begun. A funded alumni speaker series is planned, bringing leaders from these organizations to speak to Quinta's alumnae.

The networking play — any room you're in

Conferences, chambers, markets, school pickup — four kinds of conversations worth having, wherever you meet her:

YOU MEET...	YOUR MOVE
A woman founder (any stage)	The 30-second pitch, then ask about HER business. If a class fits, say which one by name and who teaches it. Hand her your card and point her to the waitlist with your referral link (it's in your portal) — September classes are ten seats each.
A certified WBE / someone pursuing certification	“We teach a Get Certified class — the founder went through WBENC herself and teaches the parts the application doesn't explain.” These women also make ideal students for Funding and First Hire.
Supplier-diversity or corporate program folks	The scholarship angle: 2% of Quinta's profit funds class scholarships (nonprofit arm planned). Corporate sponsors who fund women's business education — that's a conversation for Erika; collect the card.
Chambers, WBCs, org leaders (DEC, SBDC, TWU, etc.)	Partners, not competitors: continuing resources for our students, faculty as speakers, the future alumni speaker series, co-hosted rooms. “Three enrolled students in one city opens an in-person room there” is a great line for any non-Dallas org.

QUICK ANSWERS (THE QUESTIONS YOU'LL ACTUALLY GET)

- “How much?” — $99–$250 per class. No memberships, no packages. Scholarships coming.
- “When?” — First semester opens September 1. Fall & Spring semesters, optional summer.
- “Where?” — Dallas in person + every class on Zoom. Houston, Austin, Little Rock rooms open at three enrolled students.
- “Who teaches?” — Seven women practitioners: bookkeeper, insurance broker, HR director, brand strategist, attorney, financial planner, and the founder (entity setup, certification, and AI).
- “Is this a franchise / MLM / coaching thing?” — No. An education studio: classes, semesters, faculty.
- “Can I teach?” — “Tell me what no one tells founders in your field” — then take her card for Erika.

YOUR CLOSER, WHEN THE CONVERSATION IS WARM

“Here's the thing I love about it — every teacher is a woman you'd otherwise pay $200 an hour to sit with. For the price of a nice dinner, you get her for an hour, with nine other founders, and you leave with the thing done — and the women you did it with. That didn't exist, so Erika built it.”

Your link is your credit: any woman who signs up through your referral link (portal → copy button) is tracked to you — and seats your link fills pay you directly (85% in your class, 35% in a colleague's). Networking is literally commissioned.
